- according to his lifestyle, personal circumstances and occupation, no reasonable explanation for his disappearance can be given,
- disappearance is related to a natural disaster or suicide, or
- disappearance is related to an injury that has been sustained by an individual against their will.

Search shall be ordered immediately after the notification or official knowledge of a person's disappearance.

There is no legal remedy against the ordering of the Search Warrant.

The police department that issues the Search Warrant shall not inform the notifier in the absence of authorization with regard to the appropriate law.

- issuing the Search Warrant
- about the procedures carried out in the course of the search,
- The notifier has no access to the documents of the search, shall not have access to any copies

The Police responsible for implementing the search for a missing person who is in an unknown location shall be the Police whose jurisdiction covers

- The person's given residence,
- In the absence of a permanent given residence, a place of temporary residence,
- The last known place of permanent residence or temporary residence,
- In the absence of such lists, the last given permanent or temporary residence
- In the absence of these, the Police headquarters which has jurisdiction over the residence or institution of the person who has reported the disappearance shall be responsible.

When determining the jurisdiction of a police force in the case of a juvenile in an unknown location, the above rules shall apply to an adult who is responsible for the supervision of a minor.

In the case of a minor who is placed in temporary custody or who is in an unknown place, the relevant police force conducting the search proceedings shall apply to the place of care designated at the time of the disappearance of the minor.

Notification of the place of residence of a wanted person/missing person

Relevant legislation

- Act LXXXVIII of 2013 on the search record system and the search and identification of persons, things.
- 63/2013. (XI.28.) Minister of Interior decree on the transmission of data to certain registers of the search registration system and on the detailed rules for conducting the search procedure as well as on the amendment of certain ministerial decrees.

Brief description of the case

A person who had been subject to a Search Warrant and found shall be informed by the Police that he is subject to such a warrant by means of a notification and shall state in writing whether or not he agrees to communicate to the notifier his place of residence or the address where he was found. If the person subject to the Search Warrant refuses to make a declaration, it shall be deemed to be a denial of consent.

The police shall inform the notifier of the missing person of his residence or that he is alive, as well as of his refusal to make a declaration. Then, following the declaration of the person sought, the Police shall revoke the Search Warrant.
